Community Guidelines on Social Networks

The account mission of “Auschwitz. Not long ago. Not far away.”, managed by the Musealia communication team, is to deepen and publicize the content of the exhibition.

On all of our social platforms, we advocate respectful language and appreciate that all comments and interactions are related to account content.

While comments are not limited, the administrators of this account reserve the right to remove any post, reply or content and to block and/or report any user who comments or engages in content that includes:

- Violent language (threats, abuse, violence, racism, anti-Semitism, profanity, bullying, attack or intimidation). Hate speech towards gender, sexual orientation, religion, gender identity, age, ethnic origin or race; sexist comments; incitement or support of illegal activities; etc.
- Spam or fraudulent links.
- Advertising or promotion of requests related to any financial, commercial or non-profit organization, as well as websites, clubs, contests, raffles or promotions.
- Repetitive content, copied and pasted or duplicated and/or successive publications not related to the content of the account, shared by a single or several users.
- Intellectual property of third parties, such as material protected by copyright, trademarks or logos and/or any violation of the rights of publicity or privacy.
- Information that is false, inaccurate or misleading.
- Post personal information about any other member of the community including, but not limited to: phone number, email address, mailing address, or tax address.
- Private messages between the user and the administrators of the account or between the user and the “Auschwitz. Not long ago. Not far away.”
- Impersonate other members of the community.

By posting, commenting on or replying to any of our social media posts, you agree to comply with the aforementioned Social Media Community Guidelines and, consequently, the particular guidelines imposed by the platform you are using.

If you have any question, question or proposal related to our Community Guidelines on Social Networks, you can contact info@auschwitz.net.
